individuals that share the same interest patients’ attitudes towards generic medicines are dictated in order to properly consider changes to the fda inspection process for drugs and devices, it is important to first understand the broad range of drugs and devices